Who Needs ID Cards

Identification cards are used by many people in many aspects of their normal everyday life. When most people think about an ID Card their first thoughts are of the ID badge worn at work but this is not the complete spectrum of ID cards that we see and use everyday.

ID Card Applications

ID Cards are used to verify the identity of citizens, employees, students, permit holders, and event participants. They can also be used to identify employees to the public so they know with whom they are dealing and who to contact should they need assistance.

Fake identification can allow someone to establish an identity, obtain privileges, rent vehicles, and even to obtain other pieces of ID that will allow them past security checkpoints.

The first line of defence against the use of fraudulent identification is the human inspector. Several levels of visual security for ID cards may discourage counterfeiting and increase assurance of validation. Today's access control technology with ID card software offers tremendous benefits to organizations of every size and scope.

ID Cards are used to ensure the person is who they say they are, they have the right to be where they are and they can be trusted.
